during all those days, there was no desire to hold Golda Meir responsible, although she was, knew it, and resigned. What a difference!

The New York Times published the Israeli proposal that I mentioned a few days ago to transfer several hundred thousand Gaza Palestinians to Sinai. The US, Great Britain, and Egypt have rejected the proposal, which comes from the hardcore Likud party (and not from Military Intelligence, as was first announced). It is an insane proposal that can only lead to a growing rift with Egypt. That is exactly what Israel needs at the moment!

It seems that the US administration has its own plan for postwar Gaza, which Secretary of State Blinken discussed with Mahmoud Abbas on his current visit. According to this plan, after the war the Palestinian Authority should be extended to Gaza. Abbas will accept the proposal, if it comes with the establishment of an independent Palestinian state. How will Israel react? The present coalition will reject the proposal, of course. Does it mean that the plan is dead from the outset, or that the US will try, with the support of a majority of Israelis, to get rid of the present coalition? It is not out of the question.

The Pentagon announced that a nuclear submarine has been sent to the Mediterranean. This show of strength is in line with President Biden's policy. But a poll taken a few days ago indicates that a majority of Americans are not in favor of the president running again in the forthcoming elections, mainly due to his age.

Monday, November 6

Yesterday, pro-Palestinian demonstrations all over the US, particularly in Washington. Were it not for the chant of "from the river to the sea," and the widespread anti-Israeli calls, one could agree with the demand for a humanitarian pause of the bombing in Gaza. But what about the hostages? What are the conditions for their release? Is Israel's argument that only
