Netanyahu, Gallant, and Gantz explained in a press conference that, in response to demands by the US and other friendly nations, and on the recommendation of the army and Shin Bet, they have approved the daily delivery of 130,000 liters of fuel to the enclave, the minimum necessary for avoiding the spread of diseases and other catastrophic developments. The decision has been met with protests in the ranks of the coalition. In order to discuss the matter, Netanyahu will convene the wider cabinet in the evening. The decision was approved.

The New York Times has confirmed that the IDF has lowered a camera down the opening of the tunnel uncovered under Al-Shifa. At the bottom of a short flight of stairs, there was a short passage of approximately fifteen meters leading to an armored door with a slit through which to fire weapons, but only from the inside out.

The Yemenite Houthis hijacked a cargo ship in the Red Sea. The ship, the Galaxy Leader, is somehow linked to an Israeli company. The crew was taken hostage, but there are no Israelis among them. This is an escalation of the conflict, although the Iran-backed Houthis have already launched missiles at Israel that were intercepted by an American destroyer and, later, by Israeli missile interceptors. Beyond missile interception, Israel will not be dragged into a war with the Houthis.

Yesterday Haaretz published an article reporting that several female military personnel who were stationed on the border between Israel and Gaza before the war had warned of unusual activity on the Gaza side for several days—warnings that were not heeded, in their opinion, because they were young and also because they were women. Some of them, incapacitated after the attack, could not immediately rejoin their units and
