refugees: and the Arab-Israeli conflict, 263–64; discussed during Golda Meir's term, 262–66; following the Six-Day War, 266–68, 272; following World War I, 235–36, 264; following World War II, 236–37; Israeli "sit and do nothing" policy, 266–68, 272; from the Sinai Campaign, 252–62
refugees (Palestinian): addressed by the Saudi Initiative, 218, 220; Arab "all or nothing" stance, 207–8, 237–38, 245, 249–50, 269–71, 273; compared to other refugees, 235–37, 264, 268–69; definition of, 237–40, 268–70; family reunification plans, 239, 250–51; growing number of, 235, 239, 269; international treatment of problem, 245–52; Israeli absorption capacity, 208, 209, 246–47, 250; Israeli compromises, 244–45, 250–52, 255, 263–66, 271; in June 1948 truce, 244–45; perpetuation of problem of, 225, 237–38, 273–74; proposed solution to, 274; resettlement solution, 235–37, 246–47, 261–62, 269–70; right of return blocking resolution, 207–8, 235, 237–38, 245, 269–71, 273; stages of during War of Independence, 240–44; as subjects of the British Mandate, 238; UNRWA malpractice, 265–66; used as pawns by Arabs, 265–66; US positions on, 245–50, 265–66. See also Israeli-Palestinian conflict; UNRWA research and assessment: annual intelligence assessment, 137–38; establishment of Mossad's division, 6–7, 143–45; establishment of Shin Bet's department, 6; impact of the Agranat Commission on, 6–7, 34–35, 140–44, 305–6; initial agency responsibilities for, 134–37; interagency sharing of, 44–45, 48–50; on the Jordani- an-Israeli peace process, 186–87; MI's department prior to Yom Kippur War, 277–78; in the Mossad's mission, 11; Mossad's strategic team, 5–7; political net assessments, 10; prior to Yom Kippur War, 278–81, 296–301 resettlement (refugees): definition of Palestinian refugeehood opposing, 269–70; of First World War refugees, 235–36; options following Sinai Campaign, 254; as refugee solution, 246–47; of Second World War refugees, 236–37; UN responsibility for, 261–62 response-based strategies, 78–80 revolutionary processes, 160–67
Reza Shah (shah of Iran), 92, 94
"right of return" (Palestinian refugees): Arab "all or nothing" position, 207–8, 237–38, 249–50, 269–70, 271, 273–74; in Bernadotte's UN report, 245–46; Israeli concessions on, 271; as Israeli red line, 207–8; principle of, 237–39; in UN Resolution 194, 218, 220, 246, 263, 271, 273
Rosh Hashanah, 199
Rubinstein, Elyakim, 183, 315
Rudaki (Iranian poet), 91
Rushdie, Salman, 202
Rusk, Dean, 152
Russia: curbing nonconventional proliferation, 306; cyberattacks of, 132; desired recognition as world power, 97–98, 116–18, 233–34; famine following civil war, 236; fighting ISIS, 230; and the Iranian nuclear threat, 97–98, 119, 120; and the Israeli-Palestinian conflict, 216–17; Jewish immigration from, 258; in a new Middle East model, 232, 233–34; and North Korea, 114; during Obama administration, 104; relations with Iran, 115–18, 122; and the Snowden affair, 58; in Syria, 213, 230, 233–34, 328; territory lost following Cold War, 116. See also Soviet Union

sabotage (prevention tactic), 161, 308–9
Sadat, Anwar: appointed president, 304; assassination of, 202; expelling Soviet presence, 292; intentions of war, 18, 290–91; Marwan as aide to, 279; meetings with Brezhnev, 293; peace treaty with Israel, 304; policy planning memorandum, 283–84; pressure to carry out military action, 288; strategic goal of, 281–82, 291, 308; war preparations of, 286–88, 292–95
Safavid dynasty (Iran), 90, 91
Sagi, Uri, 144–45
Sagiv, Assaf, 162
Said bin Taimur (sultan of Oman), 195