that are ingrained among its people. This exercise will have two advantages. One, it will point the way to slowly but steadily removing the sludge of prejudice which animates much of Chinese behaviour towards India. Two, it will open the way for chipping away at our own prejudices and uninformed notions about China and the Chinese people, thereby making a more productive India–China engagement more likely, even if not inevitable. Both sides need to shed the stereotype images they harbour about each other.[16]

Shimada Kenji, Pioneer of the Chinese Revolution: Zhang Binglin and Confucianism, translated by Joshua A. Fogel, Stanford University Press, 1990.

'Essay for Fellow Scholar Liang Qichao and Others Discussing the Destruction of India Due to Its Fragmentation' by Kang Youwei, in Collected Political Writings, Tang Zhijun, ed., China Publishing House, 1981.

'Letter Opposing Kang Youwei's views on Revolution' by Zhang Taiyan, translated by Peter Yarrow, in Sources of Chinese Tradition, vol. 2, Wm. Theodore de Bary and Richard Lufrano, eds., Columbia University Press, 1999.

'A Warm Indian Welcome to a Neighbor', China Daily, 16 September 2014.

Stephen N. Hay, Asian Ideas of East and West: Tagore and His Critics in Japan, China and India, Harvard University Press, 1970, p. 210.

As quoted in Shyam Saran, 'China Looked at India Under British Rule as a Teacher – Of What Not to Be', The Print, 8 October 2020.

As quoted in 'Inventory of the Chiang Kai-shek Diaries', Online Archive of California.

Ibid.

As quoted in Shyam Saran, 'China Looked at India Under British Rule as a Teacher – Of What Not to Be', The Print, 8 October 2020.

The Editorial Department of Renmin Ribao, 'More on Nehru's Philosophy in the Light of the Sino-Indian Boundary Question', History and Public Policy Program Digital Archive, Foreign Languages Press, 1962, p. 93–134.

'Document 231: Memorandum of Conversation, Beijing, 20 June 1972', Foreign Relations of the United States, 1969–1976, vol. XVII, China, 1969–1972, Office of the Historian.

Ibid.

As quoted in Shyam Saran, 'China Looked at India Under British Rule as a Teacher – Of What Not to Be', The Print, 8 October 2020.

Ibid.

Ibid.

Chapter 14 based on the author's lecture titled 'India as Teacher by Negative Example: Chinese Perceptions of India During the British Colonial Period and Their Impact on India–China Relations' at the Institute of Chinese Studies (ICS), Delhi, 7 October 2020.