Acknowledgements

I wish to acknowledge the many friends and colleagues who encouraged me to write a sequel to my very first book, How India Sees the World , to provide a contrasting perspective from the Chinese side. Nandini Mehta was a constant guide and discerning critic – any shortcomings are entirely mine. I was able to draw upon the wisdom and expertise of many fellow travellers on the China road. The library of the India International Centre made available the many books and scholarly articles that I needed to consult while writing this book. My sincere gratitude to them all.