Yet Naim was still surprised at his treatment by right-wing activists. He asked if I had seen the photos of Ya'alon in the crosshairs. "They put a target on his face," he said, incredulously. "We don't even do that, and he's the one who shot Abu Jihad."