Russia, it was a completely peaceful process. Eastern Europe, as a political reality created by Communism and the Cold War, began to fall apart in a process that few, if any, could have predicted, let alone imagined its aftermath.

---

75. Pinheiro, T, Cieszynska, B, Eduardo Franco, J, (ed.), Peripheral identities, Iberia and Eastern Europe Between the Dictatorial Past and the European Present, Pearlbooks, 2011, p. 15.
76. Leopoldo Calvo-Sotelo, Un europeísta en la Transición, Instituto de Estudios Europeos, Madrid, 2019.
77. Naylor, p. 16.
78. Naylor, p. 6.
79. Naylor, p. 153.
80. Rutar, B, Krik mačehe, Mohorjeva založba Celovec, 2011 (in Slovenian).
81. The estimates are taken from Ljubo Sirc's book Iščemo podjetnike (GV, 1996), in the Slovenian language.
82. Naylor, p. 148.
83. Ben Fowkes, Eastern Europe 1945–1969, From Stalinism to Stagnation (Longman Pearson, 2000), p. 92. A similar estimate was produced by Ljubo Sirc.
84. See note No. 22.
85. For the comparative economic study of fringe European countries it is interesting to note that some of the Hungarian refugees who, after the quashed uprising found shelter in Ireland, were taken aback by the living standards of late 1950s Ireland.
86. www.osce.org
87. Gökay, p. 20.