Acknowledgement of Gratitude

In the evolving of the revised and updated edition of I Dare! I would like to express my gratitude to the following, without whose help and support it would not have possible for me to get all that came to me and to share all that I could:

- My family members – the Peshawarias, the Bedis, the Bharuchas, the Aroras and the Menons.
- My service/profession – the Indian Police Service as a whole, which gave me a rewarding professional life, and the United Nations, where I was involved in peace-keeping operations.
- My teachers (academic, professional and spiritual) – from school to university to the Police Academy and beyond.
- My friends – both those who loved me and those who did not.
- My non-profit organizations – which continue to keep me close to reality – and all those who support the causes these organizations are working for.
- My publishers, particularly Ashok Chopra (CEO and MD), and the editor, K. J. Ravinder (Ravi), without whom the text would not have been as it is, apart from the production manager, Rakesh Kumar, and the designer, Aeshna Roy, for their useful contributions.
- My Radio Meow programme, my television show Aap Ki Kachehri and my fortnightly columns in the Hindustan Times and other publications. These draw the maximum out of me.
- My family doctors, particularly Dr Chanchal Saluja, without whom my family (including myself) would not have enjoyed such good health.
- My dentists at the Maulana Azad Medical College, New Delhi, who have a healing touch.
- My personal staff, without whom life would have been really tough.
- People at large, for their enormous love and appreciation and without whose support many a challenge would have been insurmountable.
- The Ramon Magsaysay Foundation, which recognized the value of the power of policing in crime prevention and reform. And spread my work internationally.
- Megan Doneman and Laraine Doneman, for their documentary film Yes, Madam Sir, which is winning awards in various film festivals.
