

Nagasaki was attacked using a plutonium bomb (nicknamed ‘Fat Man’) on 9 August 1945. It is estimated that by 1950, some 140,000 people died from the bomb’s effects, including radiation. President Truman immediately halted further atomic attacks on Japan. Some believe the president had not realised the second bomb would be used so quickly after the first. (Public Domain)