

John McCone was Director of the Central Intelligence Agency. Almost alone in the Kennedy administration, he concluded in August 1962 that Khrushchev was deploying nuclear missiles in Cuba. While he was on honeymoon in France, the CIA produced an intelligence estimate that suggested Khrushchev would not do so. (Public Domain: ANL/REX Shutterstock)