91. For full details on the meetings of the Mussoorie Conference see: MSS/Eur/ E264/55(m).

92. BL/MSS/Eur/E264/12 (CC), Telegram from Chelmsford to Montagu, 30 April 1920.

93. BL/MSS/Eur/E264/55(m) (CC), Proceedings of the Ninth Meeting of the Indo-Afghan Conference, 24 June 1920.

94. BL/MSS/Eur/E264/13 (CC), Telegram from the Foreign and Political Department to Montagu, 4 Sept. 1920.

95. BL/IOR/L/PS/10/886, Telegram from Chelmsford to Montagu, 18 October 1919.

96. BL/MSS/Eur/E264/12 (CC), Telegram from Chelmsford to Montagu, 1 March 1920.

97. BL/IOR/L/PS/10/886, Telegram from Sir William Marris to All Local Governments and Administrations, 25 Nov. 1919. For further information on the Indian government's intelligence system see Popplewell, op. cit., For discussion on the effectiveness of the measure taken by the Indian government, see Chapter Five.

98. Spector, op. cit., p. 30.

99. Ibid ., p. 37. Cosroe Chaqueri notes that the declaration to Muslims had been carefully worded by the Bolshevik regime, it being sufficiently vague enough to leave venues open for future negotiations with the ruling elites of Turkey, Persia and Afghanistan, but at the same time was inflammatory enough to arouse the hopes of the Muslim masses. Chaqueri, Birth of the Trauma , p. 143.

100. Ansari, op. cit., pp. 509–37. The work by Soviet historian M.A. Persits, is also of interest for this topic, although some of the author's contentions should be approached with caution.

101. Gupta, op. cit., p. 60.