96. ‘Treaty of Lausanne’, http://wwi.lib.byu.edu/index.php/Treaty_of_Lausanne, accessed 27/8/13. See also Cooper-Busch, Mudros , pp. 359–389 and Davison, op. cit., pp. 199–209. For a contemporary opinion on the conference see Brown, ‘The Lausanne Conference’, The American Journal of International Law , Vol. 17 (1923), pp. 290–6.

97. Öke, op. cit., p. 140. ‘There were flag bearing processions, illuminations, displays of fireworks and special prayers in mosques, gurdwaras and temples.’ Naeem Qureshi, op. cit., p. 362.

98. By March 1924 the assembly had completely abolished the Caliphate: Ibid ., pp. 124–31 and p. 174.

99. As one Foreign Office official observed, ‘By kicking out the Caliph, they [the Turks] have deprived themselves of a means of squeezing us whenever it stood them to do so and have effectually knocked the bottom out of a Caliphate agitation in India.’ Quoted in Ferris, ‘Muslim Menace’, p. 71.

100. BL/MSS/Eur/E238/11 (RC), Telegram from Reading to Peel, 5 Dec. 1922.

101. Naeem Qureshi, op. cit., p. 336.

102. Özcan, op. cit., p. 198.

103. Öke, op. cit., p. 132.

104. BL/MSS/Eur/E238/12 (RC), Telegram from Reading to Peel, 6 Feb. 1923.

105. Cooper-Busch, Mudros , p. 364.

106. Öke, op. cit., p. 133.

107. See, for example, Crowe’s quote, Chapter Three.

108. BL/MSS/Eur/E238/12 (RC), Telegram from Reading to Peel, 12 Jan. 1923 and BL/MSS/Eur/E238/12 (RC), Telegram from Reading to Peel, 6