by the SED, and the facts of their present situation. Nevertheless, Ulbricht continued to keep up his courage by issuing confident statements about the progress of his economic plans and even led a delegation of unprecedented size to Moscow in November for the forty-third anniversary of the founding of the USSR.