21. Even at this point, as the pillars on which the balance of power existed – strong economy, obedient population and strong security – remained in flux, the SED continued to plod on with countless self-defeating policies. Permission for a public reading by popular author Christa Wolf, who had become vocal in her opposition to Honecker was revoked, while at the same time; party ideologist Kurt Hager attempted to override the approval of critical books by Walter Janka, Stefan Heym and Monika Maron. On a visit to Moscow, Hager privately complained that the GDR was at the mercy of a 'massive campaign by the enemy' of psychological warfare against the GDR, the SED and socialism. 'Cultural and artistic-creators, scientists and other members of the intelligentsia, workers and farmers feel there is an inconsistency between word and deed, their everyday experiences do not correspond to official reporting,' he confided to Vadim Medvedev, a Gorbachev aide and high-ranking Communist Party official. 'Consequently, a justifiable discontent forms.'

22. Klenke, Rationalisierung, Krone. p.116 as cited in Gareth Dale's The East German Revolution of 1989 p.5.

23. ADN 27 December 1989

24. Ibid

25. Neues Deutschland . 6 October 1989

26. Schabowski. p.126

27. 'Das Interview,' ARD, 1991.

28. Wilson Center Archives.
https://digitalarchive.wilsoncenter.org/document/117207

29. Honecker Cross Examined . p.47.

30. DPA 23 November 1989

31. Honecker Cross Examined . p.47.