

Honecker found modest lodgings on Brusseler Strasse and, still relatively lean and fit, was able to make covert handovers of clandestine material and even smuggle a small printing press into the heart of the Nazi capital. (Nathan Morley)