Cheekily described as ‘horse face’ by detractors, Honecker considered Ego Krenz (pictured) of pleasing appearance and manner – he even had the makings of a successor.