Set in the midst of warming relations, authorities in Bonn discovered that Gunter Guillaume – one of Willy Brandt's intimate advisers and personal assistant – was, in fact, spying for the East German Stasi. The scandal caused the resignation of Brandt and soured Bonn-East Berlin relations.