forget that she wouldn’t be here now without him and the price he’d paid to save her.

Rose turned to the window, the leaden sky behind torn white clouds. She couldn’t deny the bond that existed between them. Not the bond he wanted, but a fragile thread that she couldn’t break because that would mean breaking a part of herself. She didn’t know how long it would take, but she would be patient and wait for the coppery light to return.