Acknowledgements

I want to thank the entire team at Embla for your professionalism and support in shaping this book. Your insightful feedback and attention to detail have made all the difference.

To Heather Steele, at the non-profit World War II History Project, thank you for accompanying me to Dresden and Glashütte, for translating during interviews, for your passionate research support and for answering my relentless questions about German history.

To Camille Fauroux, I'm grateful for the extensive research you put into writing Produire la guerre, produire le genre, Des Françaises au travail dans l'Allemagne nationale-socialiste (1940–1945), which shed light on the forgotten and obscured stories of the French women who 'volunteered' to work in Germany.

To the talented writer Nola d'Enis, a million thanks for brainstorming plot points at all hours of the day and night and for encouraging me always.

With love, to my husband, Ivan, thank you for being my most important reader.