1950s) and hence my personal recollection is also helpful in putting together the narrative. The book is not a purely academic work. It is intended to be a researched account of events, accompanied by analysis that might hold lessons for India in future negotiations with China.