[*] According to Theodore Sorensen, “The odds that the Soviets would go all the way to war, he [John Kennedy] later said, seemed to him then ‘somewhere between one out of three and even’” (Kennedy [New York: Harper & Row, 1965], p. 705).