reasons, which are not really related to the issues thrown up by the CCE report and which go beyond student politics, that after all only affect those who access higher education.[45] Rather 'many transition to citizenship without developing an understanding of their rights as citizens or the responsibilities that citizenship entails. Thus, they view politics mostly in terms of political office, rather than as a comprehensive set of relations where voting and participating in public life are as important as successfully contesting elections' (UNDP 2017, p. 106). Furthermore, the security state is increasingly creating an atmosphere of self-censorship, where students and academics are discouraged from engaging in any form of activism that might challenge the national narrative of the state.

Notes

1 This focus group included participants from Hyderabad, Sukkur and Karachi.
2 This focus group included participants from Lahore, Sheikhupura, Muridke, Dera Ghazi Khan and Sargodha.
3 A detailed history of student politics and the various bans is detailed by Paracha (2000). Two notable bans when Pakistan was under military rule were in 1958 when the NSF (as well as student politics) was banned when Field Marshal Ayub Khan imposed the country's first martial law. This included a fresh crackdown on student radicals. On 15 February 1984, General Zia-ul-Haq imposed a ban on student unions in all colleges throughout the country.
4 The other 'unrecognized' organizations in West Pakistan included The Inter-Collegiate Body (ICB), The All-Pakistan Students' Organization (APSO), The Karachi Students' Federation (KSF), The Girl Students' Congress, The National Students' Organization (NSO), and The West Pakistan Students' League (Ministry of Education 1966, p. 8).
5 'Three Days That Shook the Country' (https://drsarwar.wordpress.com/2009/11/16/three-days-that-shook-the-country-students-herald-jan-19-1953/). (see Herald Student, 1953).
6 Set up after the student agitations in the 1960s.
7 Visiting lecturer at the time at LUMS.
8 Also see Bolognani and Lyons 2011.
9 Imran Khan, Pakistan's former cricket captain, comes from outside the traditional political establishment; however, he is part of the elite. He is seen as having delivered on two counts: cricket and building a cancer hospital in his mother's memory; this has given him credibility on the political scene.