on the role of reforming the education system, though the process of educational reform varies across provinces. This is particularly true of curricular reform and the objective of promoting tolerance and removing discriminatory content from textbooks. The Punjab Curriculum Implementation Framework (School Education Department 2014) for instance clearly highlights the importance of the curriculum in promoting 'values for peaceful co-existence, unity in diversity, and development of positive attitudes towards fellow human beings through respect and tolerance' (p. 4). Yet the Peace and Education Foundation (2016) has reported that while some 'objectionable content' has been removed from textbooks by the Punjab and KP textbook boards, new discriminatory content has instead been added. The textbook boards for Sindh and Balochistan have yet to undertake effective reforms in 'removing objectionable content' (pp. 2–3). According to the Peace and Education Foundation (2016) examples of new 'objectionable content' includes the following: 'The Governor of Rome remained neutral as he knew the deceitfulness of Jews. He left the decision [of Jesus' punishment] on religious scholars of Jews. Upon the decision of the Crucifixion of Jesus, the Jews became happy. They tortured Jesus badly. Jesus was surrounded by a crowd of Jewish enemies' in Grade 5 Islamic Studies textbook by the Balochistan Textbook Board (p. 24); 'The Urdu-Hindi dispute and the division of Bengal unleashed the evil aims of the Hindus. With the passage of time, their anti-Muslim activities reached a peak' in Grade 7 Social Studies textbook by the Balochistan Textbook Board (p. 26); 'in the last half of the twentieth century, the Muslim world was free from Western oppression, but the West continued its conspiracies to keep Muslims disempowered so that Muslims could never become a super power of the world again. ... In 1949, the Jews tried to set fire to the occupied Al-Aqsa mosque', in Grade 6 Urdu textbook by the KP Textbook Board (p. 29); 'there were two enemies of Muslims, the Englishmen and Hindus. Both of these were against the formation of Pakistan. On one hand, the Englishmen renounced the division plan of Hindustan, while on the other hand, Hindus were planning to occupy the entire Hindustan and enslave Muslims', in Grade 7 Urdu textbook by the Sindh Textbook Board (p. 33); 'Jihad in Islam means making efforts for pre-eminence of truth by all means of sacrificing one's financial, physical and mental capabilities for the sake of Allah, Even one should not hesitate to sacrifice lives of their family, relatives, and friends,' in Islamic Studies Grades 9/10 for Sindh Textbook Board (p. 34); 'Hindus tried to extinguish the Muslim dominated province of East Bengal and Assam in order to squeeze/hurt Muslims through a conspiracy,' in Grade 10 Urdu textbook by the Punjab Textbook Board (p. 37). Whether a textbook for Urdu, Islamic Studies, Pakistan Studies or Social Studies