Appendix 1: Pakistani Terror Groups[1]

JI: Jamaat-e-Islami, the vanguard of modernist political Islam and the most organized and politically active religious party.

JUI: Jamiat Ulema-e-Islam, the main Sunni-Deobandi political party and successor in Pakistan to the Jamiatul Ulema-e-Hind in pre-partition India. The party is divided into three factions, denoted by the initials of their leaders: JUI-Samiul Haq (JUI-S), JUI-Fazlur Rahman (JUI-F), and JUI-Ajmal Qadri (JUI-Q). The three factions control most Pakistani madrassas. The JUI madrassas were also the main supply line of Afghan jihadis in the 1980s.

Jaish-e-Mohammed: Deobandi jihadi group whose main aim is to unite Kashmir with Pakistan. They have acted as the military's proxy in Kashmir.

Lashkar-e-Islami: A Deobandi extremist group based in FATA's Khyber agency.

Lashkar-e-Tayyaba (LeT), renamed Jamaat-ud-Dawa (JD): Punjab-based jihadi outfit responsible for the 2008 Mumbai attacks.

Sipah-e-Sahaba Pakistan (SSP): A Deobandi militant organization, which pioneered organized sectarian militancy in the country.

Tehrik-e-Nifaz-e-Shariat-e-Mohammadi (TNSM): A Swat-based Sunni radical group, responsible for sending thousands of fighters to help the Taliban after US-led attacks on Afghanistan in October 2001.

Tehrik-i-Taliban Pakistan (TTP): Formed in December 2007 by senior leaders of some forty militant groups, a loose alliance of Pakistani Taliban groups and movements crusading for the implementation of Sharia law mainly in the tribal areas of NWFP, setting up private courts and prisons in areas under their influence. Originally led by South Waziristan-based Baitullah Mehsud until his death on 5 August 2009 in a US drone attack, and then led by his former deputy Hakimullah Mehsud, the TTP is loosely allied to Lashkar-e-Tayyaba and the Jaish-e-Mohammed (which are both seen by the military as 'good' militants).

There are also a few foreign jihadi outfits, including the Islamic Movement of Uzbekistan (IMU) and the East Turkestan Islamic Movement, both of which are
