participants continued to believe in the future of Pakistan, but the language used to express that belief echoed sentiments of patriotism, expressing how they would always serve their nation. This patriotism, as the chapters in this book illustrate, is the result of an education system that reinforces a nationalist ideology, inculcating a strong narrative of sacrifice for the country; this is reinforced through the media as well as political (or military) rhetoric.

10 The Pashtuns in the sample are not representative of KP in its entirety. Their points of view, especially in relation to their lived reality as citizens, is nonetheless important in highlighting regional disparities.

11 Karachi is the provincial centre of Sindh, and the financial capital of Pakistan; Daharki and Tando Allahyar are cities in Sindh; Hub is a city in Balochistan, and Quetta is the provincial centre of Balochistan; Bahawalpur, Dera Ghazi Khan and Sahiwal are cities in Punjab, with Lahore the provincial centre of Punjab; Abbottabad is a city located in eastern KP, Muzaffarabad is the capital of Azad Kashmir, and Islamabad is the capital of Pakistan.

12 Hyderabad is a city in Sindh; Sargodha, Rajanpur, Kasur, Muridke, Faisalabad, Sialkot and Sheikhupura are cities in Punjab; Peshawar is the provincial centre of KP.