84 Political representation or opportunities are also a problem; according to UNDP since 'the entire community within the country or province is considered a constituency … the elected representatives of minorities do not have a geographical constituency in which to locate a development project; thus, depriving the minority communities of development opportunities that other communities benefit from' (UNDP 2016b, p. 15). These in-built sociopolitical structures lead to the disengagement of whole minority communities (UNDP 2016a).
