Acknowledgments

This book has been the labor of many years (on and off) and started life with a very different title and scope. My friend, fellow author (and the technical reviewer for this book) Matt Zandstra, told me that the best part about writing a book is you get to write a book, and the worst part is you have to write a book. Matt, you weren't wrong! My deepest thanks to you for all your help and advice.

I am fortunate that my editor at Apress, Mark Powers, liked what I was doing even if it wasn't what was planned, and with his support Apress agreed to a title change and a radical shift in the scope of the work. A huge thank-you therefore to Mark (who was so supportive in those vital initial years) and to the others at Apress: Melissa Duffy and Gryffin Winkler.

Along the way there were some drastic changes in my life. In 2024 my younger brother, Ben (to whom this book is dedicated), took his own life, right as I was coming to terms with the end of my marriage. During those dark, utterly bleak days I was blessed with the love and support of many friends. I would not be here – and this book would not exist – if it had not been for my children, Ingrid, my sister Julia, mum, Ben's friend (and now mine) Kate, Craig, Brother Dave, Demelza…. Thank you all for looking out for me when I was losing my mind with grief. Sincere thanks also to my team at Awin, who rallied around me when the going got tough. Nico, thank you for all your kindness, especially on the days where I just couldn't function. My gratitude also goes to Survivors of Bereavement by Suicide (https://uksobs.com).

Finally, special thanks to my partner, Anna: the final piece of the puzzle. Your honest and patient love continues to amaze me; I will endeavor to be worthy of it. I would not have finished this book without you (or Jess).
