```
php artisan serve
```

This command launches a local development server, typically running which you can open in your web browser and navigate to this address. You should see Laravel's welcome page—this page is your first confirmation that the installation was successful and that your Linux server is now set up for Laravel development.