status code.

```
        return response()->json($response, 200);

    }

}
```

In the above code, the index method constructs a structured JSON response with three clear keys:

- A flag indicating the status of the request.
- The actual payload containing the list of products.
- A human-readable message providing additional context.

This structure ensures that any client consuming the API will receive consistent and predictable data.
