Nixon was nominated, I was the most relieved person in the world. I knew I wasn’t ready to be president.

We spent almost three days on the yacht and we didn’t pay any more attention to the convention. We were relaxed and very happy when we got back to California. I knew there was still lots of work to be done in Sacramento.