encouragement in numerous dialogues, correspondences, and solidarity movements with women from this community led to ongoing, reciprocal friendships with a number of them, including May Ayim and Katharina Oguntoye. It also led to the production of the movement's foundational 1987 literary text, Farbe Bekennen: Afro-deutsche Frauen auf den Spuren ihrer Geschichte (Showing Our Colors: Afro-German Women Speak Out), an anthology of autobiographical and poetic writings for which Lorde wrote the foreword, which included fragments drawn directly from this previous journal entry. As Lorde worked alongside these women, she posited Afro-German women writers as connected to a larger constellation of communities of African diasporic women and women of color.[47]
