“Brandenburg Gate”), Jake Shears of Scissor Sisters (Nightwork), and Michael Stipe of R.E.M. (“ÜBerlin”); filmmakers Tilda Swinton and Cynthia Beatt (The Invisible Frame); visual and performance artists Richard Avedon (Brandenburg Gate), Frank Hallam Day (East Berlin), Jenny Holzer (Reichstag entrance project), Adrian Piper (Escape to Berlin: A Travel Memoir, The Adrian Piper Research Archive Foundation Berlin), and Stephanie Syjuco (The Berlin Wall), among an extensive and growing list of others.

13. Unpublished German book folder (uncataloged), LFP, and Freed, Ebner, and Farber, Re-Made, 41.

14. Unpublished German book folder (uncataloged), LFP.

15. Freed, Ebner, and Farber, Re-Made.

16. Davis, Are Prisons Obsolete?

17. “Prof. Angela Davis at Occupy Berlin Camp, 18 November 2011,” http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=4PrAL6BIfxE.

18. Johanna Heuveling, “Angela Davis speaks with refugees in Berlin,” May 16, 2015, http://www.werkstatt-der-kulturen.de/download/Pressenza%20Angela%20Davis%20speaks%20with%20refugees%20in%20Berlin.pdf.

19. “Angela Davis and Toni Morrison: Literacy, Libraries, Liberation,” New York Public Library Video, October 27, 2010, http://www.nypl.org/events/programs/2010/10/27/angela-davis-toni-morrison.

20. Ibid.

21. In Shola Lynch’s film Free Angela and All Political Prisoners (2013), Davis notes of her own development, “And then, of course, I ended up studying in Germany, when these new developments in the black movement happened. The emergence of the Black Panther Party. And my feeling was that, I want to be there. This is earth shaking, this is change. I want to be a part of that. … I saw the photograph of the Black Panther Party in some newspaper when I was studying in Germany. And again, I had this sense the world is changing, my world is changing, and I do want to be a part of this. And I decided that I would go back. I would go back, and I decided to go to San Diego, which is where Marcuse was.”

22. Angela Y. Davis, “On Palestine, G4S and the Prison Industrial Complex,” in Freedom Is a Constant Struggle, 55–56.

23. Davis, Freedom Is a Constant Struggle, 59–60.

24. Klase Tajiri, pamphlet (uncataloged), STE.

25. Tajiri, Autobiographical Notations, 72–73.

26. Ibid.

27. Tajiri, Berlin Wall, 4.

28. Unpublished journal entry [November 10, 1989], box 46, no. 35, ALP.

29. Unpublished journal entry [January 5, 1990], box 46, no. 35, ALP.

30. For the latter group, PDS (Party of Democratic Socialism), a poster that reads, “Für die Schwachen eine starke Opposition” (For the weak a strong opposition), attempts to leverage fears of swift change among East Germans by claiming strident opposition to the governing parties of the West even as they refer to their potential constituents as weak and in need of protection. Here, Lorde poses in front of ads for several political parties attempting to continue to reform the new government through socialism, including the Bündnis 90 and PDS. See Thompson, Crisis of the German Left, 116.

31. Audre Lorde and Gloria Joseph, “Black Women Find Racism Rampant in Germany,” Off Our Backs 22, no. 10 (November 1992): 18. For more on racial violence during the period of reunification, see Panikos Panayi, “Racial Violence in the New Germany 1990–93,” Contemporary European History 3, no. 3 (November 1994): 265–87.