entered the peace process in bad faith and used negotiations as a tactic of political warfare to gain benefits without making reciprocal concessions.[43]

Given the radically rejectionist world view of the other side with its ongoing program of incitement to hatred and violence, we do not have a situation which can be split down the middle. We are now engaged in a protracted religious, political, and military war. If we can face this reality, then we may be better able to defend ourselves.

- We must fight against the campaign of delegitimization by discrediting the other side wherever it engages in myths and lies;
- We should produce good, honest history, not only for others but also for ourselves;
- We should insist on our territorial rights and stand up for our sovereignty and right to self-defense under international law;
- Where possible, we need to prevent unwelcome interference in our domestic politics. We must challenge those outside players, states or otherwise, which give comfort and counsel to our enemies;
- We ought to undermine the sources of political and financial support of our enemies and limit the hostile political activities of the non-governmental organizations.

Israel should seize the initiative and build on the advantages of our code of morality, independence, and strength. At present, the Jewish State can act with increasing effectiveness because of the remarkable human resources it possesses. But it is necessary and feasible to go beyond long-standing habits of relying on improvisation to adopt a consistent long-term policy against the anti-Zionist delegitimization campaign the Palestinians have exploited as a weapon of political warfare.

NOTES

1. Carl von Clausewitz, On War, edited and translated by Michael Howard and Peter Paret (Princeton: Princeton University Press, 1984), Book I, chapter 1, item 24, p. 87.
2. Ibid., 77.
3. Stefan T. Possony, People's War; The Art of Combining Partisan-Military, Psycho-Social, and Political Conquest Techniques (Taipei: World Anti-Communist League, 1970), 44. For background information on the subject of propaganda, see E. H. Carr, Propaganda in International Politics (Oxford Pamphlets on World Affairs, no. 16; Oxford: Clarendon, 1939), and Philip M. Taylor, "Propaganda from Thucydides to Thatcher," http://www.leeds.ac.uk/ics/arts-pt1.htm. On the use of people's war strategy in the context of the Oslo Agreement, see: Joel Fishman, "Ten Years Since Oslo: The PLO's 'People's War' Strategy and Israel's Inadequate Response," Jerusalem Center for Public Affairs, Jerusalem Viewpoints, no. 503, 1 Sept. 2003, www.jcpa.org/jl/vp503.htm.

Copyright © 2016. Nebraska. All rights reserved.

Anti-Judaism, Antisemitism, and Delegitimizing Israel, Nebraska, 2016. ProQuest Ebook Central,