an oppressed Palestinian—and this at a time when many Christian denominations are renewing their interest in the very Jewishness of Jesus.

Concluding this volume is Robert Wistrich's essay on "Gaza, Hamas, and the "New" Antisemitism," in which he demonstrates the thread that links the vicious anti-Jewish and anti-Zionist rhetoric found in radical Islamist preaching and the current jihad in Europe that targets not only Jews but European institutions as well.

Thus, this volume offers a variety of viewpoints and insights into current disturbing trends worldwide, providing a basis for further discussion and efforts to counter the increasingly vocal and violent hatred of Jews and Israel.
