on video tape and utterly uncontradicted." Dershowitz provides proof for these and many other statements illustrating the commission's bias.[16]

The substantiated criticism of the Goldstone Commission report goes far beyond pointing out the biased assignment and the prejudice of the commission members. The report itself was also extremely deficient. The aforementioned book contains a letter from lawyer Trevor Norwitz to Goldstone. Norwitz clearly proves that the commission report was "deeply flawed," "unbalanced and inflammatory," "a procedurally deficient rush to judgment, and incapable of producing any meaningful findings."[17]

Norwitz mentions that the UNHRC resolution, which had given the Goldstone Commission its mandate, was in Goldstone's own words, "very lopsided" and "unfair." It had authorized a mission to demonize Israel while legitimizing and even whitewashing Hamas.

In his letter to Goldstone, Norwitz took the Report apart. Its paragraphs have headings such as "Your Procedurally Flawed Investigation," "Failure to Investigate Critical Facts," "Use of Hearsay and Anonymous Accusations as Evidence." The letter continues with such headings as "More Prejudice than Proof," "Double Standards in Assessment of Credibility of Evidence and Intentions," "Seeking Political Impact Rather than Truth," "Lawmaking Rather than Fact-Finding," "Piling on Gratuitous anti-Israel Criticisms," "Legitimizing Hamas," "Your Ahistorical Context," and finally, "The Language of Your Report Illustrates its Bias."[18]

The Goldstone Report not only provides us with a prism on the UNHRC, Judge Goldstone, and the other commission members; it also affirms the distorted characteristics of important aspects of international humanitarian law. There were some negative comments, but no huge outcry, from the large community of international law experts. In other words, a relatively quick look at an issue which concerns Israel provides a larger perspective on what is wrong with a sizable academic profession.

HUMANITARIAN RACISM

How Israel is treated also sheds light on the rarely-recognized phenomenon of "humanitarian racism." It can be defined as attributing intrinsically reduced responsibility for criminal intentions and behavior to certain ethnic or national groups, even when their misconduct is extreme. Humanitarian racists judge delinquency and crime according to criteria such as the color and socio-economic status of the perpetrator. For example, white people are held to higher standards of responsibility than are people of color.[19] Jews are judged differently from Arabs.

Copyright © 2016. Nebraska. All rights reserved.

Anti-Judaism, Antisemitism, and Delegitimizing Israel, Nebraska, 2016. ProQuest Ebook Central,