European Union. The only reply received was an acknowledgement by a junior EU official that the document had been received.[21]

If the European Union believed its interpretation of international law was solid, it would have given a persuasive answer to the document. Alternatively, the EU could have organized a conference to put its case forward. And yet nothing was done, despite the fact that not only did these thousand lawyers think that Israeli settlements are legal, but so did the U.S. Reagan administration as well.[22]

Medieval Thinking

Israel provides a prism through which to understand several other facets of what is radically wrong with the European Union. The EU has about 400 million citizens of 16 years and older. Over 40% of them embrace a demonic view of Israel. This was shown, for example, by a study of the University of Bielefeld, carried out on behalf of the Friedrich Ebert Foundation of the German Social Democrat party, and published in 2011.[23]

In 2008, researchers polled one thousand people over the age of sixteen in each of seven European countries. One of the questions asked was whether they were in agreement with the statement that "Israel is carrying out a war of extermination against the Palestinians." The lowest percentages of those who agreed with this statement were in Italy and the Netherlands, with 38% and 39% respectively. In other countries, the percentages were higher: 41% in Hungary; in the United Kingdom, 42%; in Germany 48%; and in Portugal 49%. In Poland, the figure reached 63%.

These opinions held by large parts of the EU population are a form of extreme slander. During two years alone, from the end of 1941 until the end of 1943, 2 million people—mainly Jews—were murdered by the Germans in the extermination camps of Treblinka, Belzec, and Sobibor alone. Technology, including that of murder, has greatly advanced since then. If the genocidal accusations against Israel were even remotely true, the last of Palestinian adults and children would have been killed long ago. In fact, the Palestinian population under Israeli rule and in the Palestinian territories has grown very considerably. Yet the myth persists.

If people falsely accuse others of being mass murderers, this reflects the mindset of the accusers. Such hate-filled opinions provide a prism on a large part of the EU population. whose mindset is not only irrational, but also provides an infrastructure for potentially crimnal acts. One might conclude that they are even more backward in their thinking than their medieval antisemitic ancestors. Medieval Europeans had no way to verify that
