on illicit methods to squeeze out profits. In his 1844 essay, "On the Jewish Question," Karl Marx himself mocked Judaism and Jews in the manner of Christian theologians, declaring that "money is the jealous god of Israel, in face of which no other god may exist."[8] The far left, by repeatedly equating Israel, the Jewish State, with Nazi Germany—the most criminal of nations—draws on the New Testament's identification of the Jews as deicides, having committed the most criminal of acts. The equation also draws on the medieval view that the Jewish people possess demonic traits—now characterizing the Jewish state as the most sinister source of evil in the world.

Notably, after World War II far rightists also frequently equated Israel with the Third Reich. For example, Freda Utley, the far right's most prominent commentator on the Middle East, in 1957 denied that Israel was a democracy and insisted that the Jewish state implemented "oppressive and discriminatory laws similar to those of the Nazis in Germany" and carried out "liquidations" of Arabs.[9] Such comparisons of Israel with Nazi Germany were fueled by the far right's long-standing depiction of Jews as a genocidal people, a notion rooted in the image of the Jew as Christ-Killer. Charles Coughlin, the Catholic priest and fascist sympathizer who regularly broadcast antisemitic diatribes to millions of Americans during the 1930s and 1940s, claimed that in the last decade of the first century CE, "Jews killed, in and outside of Rome, crowds of Christians innumerable as the sands of the sea." Coughlin claimed that the Soviet leadership was almost entirely Jewish and had murdered twenty million Christians between 1917 and 1938.[10]

Shortly after the Six-Day War, the Student Non-Violent Coordinating Committee (SNCC), which had recently embraced radical black nationalism and positioned itself on the far left, published in its newsletter a lengthy anti-Israel diatribe, accompanied by a viciously antisemitic drawing of a hand marked with a Star of David with a dollar sign in it, holding ropes strangling Egyptian dictator Gamal Abdel Nasser and African-American boxer Muhammad Ali. A black arm with a sword labeled "Third World liberation movement" is about to slice the ropes. The SNCC newsletter explicitly compared Israel to Nazi Germany, running a blurred photograph of Israeli soldiers allegedly shooting Arabs lined up against a wall. The caption read: "this is the Gaza Strip, Palestine, not Dachau, Germany." SNCC claimed that Israel had been established "through terror, force, and massacres." To SNCC, the Zionists' primary motive in their effort to establish a Jewish state in Palestine was their lust for wealth. SNCC depicted the Zionist movement as a conspiracy between "the famous European Jews, the Rothschilds," who had "long controlled the wealth of many European nations," and the British
