Establishing a Jewish state in Palestine would solidify the Rothschilds' control of the Suez Canal, a waterway vital to global commerce. Parasitic Jewish "toll gate keepers," already on the job, were piling excessive taxes on ships passing through the Canal, fastening the Rothschilds' "golden chains" on the world's producers.[42]

Decades later, the white supremacist Sons of Liberty, based in Metairie, Louisiana, continued the far right's campaign to discredit Zionism by portraying it as a form of Jewish extortion. In 1976, the Sons of Liberty reprinted The Jews and the British Empire by Leslie Fry, one of the most vicious antisemitic polemicists of the 1930s. Fry's screed, first published in 1935, claimed that the Zionists, directed by the Rothschilds since Disraeli's time, were responsible for Britain's imperialist policies. The Zionists were determined to control Palestine, "the gateway between the East and West," not just "to ensure the security of Jewish trade," but to "swamp" everything from "Cairo to the Cape road." Fry anticipated the Black Panthers' claim that Zionists controlled South Africa's mineral wealth. She declared that Britain had waged war against the Boers between 1899 and 1902 "to secure gold and diamond fields for the Jews."[43]

Both the far left and far right readily accepted Arabs' claims that antisemitism did not exist in their countries. This unwillingness to acknowledge the deeply entrenched antisemitism in the Arab world resembled Communists' long insistence that there was no antisemitism in the Soviet Union. In 1969 New Left Notes endorsed Al Fatah leader Yassir Arafat's statement that "Arabs have never discriminated against Jews."[44] The Trotskyist Socialist Workers Party attributed any Arab hostility toward Jews in the Middle East to "the crimes of Zionism."[45] The Black Panthers also insisted that Arabs and Jews had always lived in harmony before the Zionists attempted to establish a Jewish state in Palestine. They even denied that the Arabs were responsible for the destruction of the centuries-old Jewish communities in North Africa and the Near East. The Panthers claimed instead that "it was Zionist intrigue, machinations, and schemes which uprooted the majority of Jews from Arab countries."[46]

The far leftists were merely echoing the position the far right had advanced since the 1930s. Coughlin's Social Justice had insisted in 1938 that Jewish immigration to Palestine encouraged by the Balfour Declaration had reversed centuries of peace between Arabs and Jews.[47] Gerald L. K. Smith's The Cross and the Flag repeated the same claim in 1949.[48] Freda Utley wrote that Jews in the Arab world "lived unmolested and on terms of amity with the Arab peoples for hundreds of years prior to the Zionist expulsion of Arabs from Palestine." In 1958 she claimed that Egypt's Jews suffered no
