America's most prominent antisemite since the mid-1970s, has a very sizeable following and significant backing from African-American students, who frequently invite Farrakhan and other NOI leaders to speak on campus. The African American socialist Paul Robeson, Jr., aptly described Farrakhan to the author as "a black man in a brown shirt."

The major American neo-Nazi websites, Stormfront and National Vanguard, denounced Israel's military actions against Hamas in the Gaza "ghetto" as a "Holocaust" and accused the Jewish state of deliberately massacring innocent civilians, especially children. Far right coverage of the 2014 Gaza conflict invoked medieval antisemitic images of sadistic Jews who delight in ritually murdering innocent gentile children. Both Stormfront and National Vanguard described Israelis "bringing lawn chairs and refreshments to high vantage points overlooking Gaza and laughing and cheering" as the Israeli military unleashed "firebombs and missiles and tanks" to liquidate "Palestinians and their children in their homes, schools, and hospitals below."[53] The Israelis were the new Inquisitors, presiding like Spain's fifteenth-century monarchs over a new auto-da-fé.

The NOI's position on Gaza was indistinguishable from that of the white neo-Nazis. Its newspaper, The Final Call, condemned the "genocidal military assault against the Palestinian people" carried out by Israel's "bloodthirsty military apparatus." The Final Call favorably cited Iran's "supreme leader" Ayatollah Ali Khamanei's characterization of Israel as a "rabid dog." The NOI endorsed Iran's charge that the Jewish state's "use of the most lethal weapons against the defenseless Palestinians in Gaza" constituted "war crimes and crimes against humanity."[54]

The American far left denunciation of Israel's response to Hamas's continuous firing of rockets at its civilians was almost identical to the far right's. The RCP condemned Israel's "savage escalation" of its "genocidal attacks." It called Gaza "the world's largest outdoor prison," populated by Palestinians whom the Israelis allegedly drove from their homes in 1948 by "massacres and terror."[55] The ISO called Israel's military campaign a "barbaric war" on the Palestinians, victims, it claimed, of "more than a century of Zionist colonialism, dispossession, ethnic cleansing, racism, apartheid, and genocide."[56] The Trotskyist Spartacist League, equating Israel with the Nazis, denounced the Jewish state's "latest terror bombing of its Gaza concentration camp." The Zionists, "armed to the teeth," threatened to carry out "a major bloodbath of Palestinians."[57]

Ignoring Hamas's firing rockets from civilian areas, amidst schools and hospitals, far left and far right groups insisted that civilian casualties in Gaza resulted from the Jewish state's genocidal objectives. They neglected to
