mention Israel's policy of informing Gazans about bombings in advance, so they could evacuate targeted areas. The far left Workers World Party claimed that Israeli weaponry was so sophisticated it could hit any target with "pinpoint precision," but Israel instead chose to bomb indiscriminately "a trapped civilian population." Thus, the Israeli "settler state" committed "war crimes" in Gaza. The NOI similarly insisted that Israel's air-to-ground missiles "are so accurate that they can destroy a very small target without any damage to civilian structure." But the satanic Jewish state preferred to slaughter non-combatants in schools, hospitals, and mosques.[58]

Conclusion

In conclusion, the far left and far right inhabit the same Bizarro world in which reality is turned upside down. Both portray Zionism as a movement sponsored by wealthy Jewish financiers who coveted Palestine for its unparalleled riches. Actually, Zionist immigrants settled an arid land that lacked natural resources. They reclaimed swamps and made previously uncultivated land fertile through decades of taxing physical labor and later, inventive forms of irrigation. U.S. State Department officials repeatedly insisted for years that the Zionist project was doomed because Palestine was devoid of resources.[59]

The far left and far right claimed that Zionism was a plutocratic movement, invoking the long-standing antisemitic stereotype of the non-productive, devious Jew who accumulates wealth by speculation and exploitation of gentile labor. In reality, the Zionist movement was significantly influenced by socialism and backed predominantly by working- and lower-middle-class Jews. Wealthier Jews were less likely to sympathize with Zionism.

The far left and far right recast the Jewish state as the new Nazi Germany—Israel, peopled by Holocaust survivors, veterans of Allied combat against the Germans, and refugees from the world's most antisemitic regimes and populations. Israel grew out of a Zionist movement that aggressively challenged Nazism from the time Hitler assumed power in Germany. Zionists in the American Jewish Congress organized the first mass protests against Nazi antisemitism in the United States, staged on March 27, 1933, less than two months after Hitler came to power. An estimated one million American Jews participated in enormous street demonstrations and rallies in more than ten major American cities, which received extensive newspaper coverage in the United States and Western Europe.[60] These protests helped spark a mass

Copyright © 2016. Nebraska. All rights reserved.

Anti-Judaism, Antisemitism, and Delegitimizing Israel, Nebraska, 2016. ProQuest Ebook Central,