3. Randolph Bourne (1896–1918), "Trans-National America," Atlantic Monthly, 118 (July 1916): 86–97.

4. Ahad Ha'am [Asher Ginsburg], "Imitation and assimilation" (1893), in At the Crossroad—Selected Essays, by Ahad Ha'Am, translated by Leon Simon (Philadelphia: Jewish Publication Society of America, 1912).

5. Gerda Lerner, Why History Matters (New York: Oxford University Press, 1997), 6–7.

6. Marrano (anusim, conversos): Jews living in the Iberian Peninsula who publicly converted and behaved as Christians, but remained secretly faithful to Judaism. Various origins for the term "marrano" have been suggested, such as the pejorative "pig" in Spanish. In Hebrew some linked it with the expression mar-it ayin (the appearance of the eye), referring to the fact that the Marranos were ostensibly Christian but actually Jews.

7. Eve Kosofsky Sedgwick, Epistemology of the Closet (New York: Harvester Wheatsheaf, 1990; rev. ed., Berkeley, Calif.: University of California Press, 2008). This book is considered foundational to Queer Studies.

8. Jacques Derrida, "Abraham, the Other," in Judeities: Questions for Jacques Derrida, edited by Bettina Bergo, Joseph Cohen, and Raphael Zagury-Orly, translated by Bettina Bergo and Michael B. Smith. (New York: Fordham University Press, 2007), 6–10.

9. Hélène Cixous, "This Stranjew Body," in Judeities, 56.

10. Hélène Cixous, "Le rire de la Méduse" (1975); idem, "The laugh of Medusa," translated by Keith Cohen and Paula Cohen, Signs 1, no. 4 (Summer 1976): 875–93. Cixous first explains the invention of a new insurgent writing that will allow women to "transform their history, to seize the occasion to speak." http://www.dwrl.utexas.edu/~davis/crs/e321/Cixous-Laugh.pdf.

11. Betty Friedan, "Women and Jews, The Quest of Selfhood," Congress Monthly (Feb.–Mar. 1985): 8.

12. Theodor Herzl, The Complete Diaries of Theodor Herzl, edited by Raphael Patai, translated by Harry Zohn (New York: Herzl Press and T.Yoseloff, 1960), entry for June 14, 1895.

13. Emmanuel Levinas, "Être juif" (To be a Jew), Confluences, nos. 15–17 (1947); reprinted in Cahiers d'Études Lévinassiennes, no. 1 (2002): 99–106, Benny Lévy, "Commentaire," ibid., 107–17. Lévy explained that "Jewish facticity" is the impossibility of escaping from being a Jew: "I cannot not be a Jew."

14. Jewish philosopher Emil Fackenheim (1916–2003) used to say that continuing Jewish life (after the Holocaust) must be "the Jewish 614th law"—a reference to the 613 mitzvot (commandments) given to the Jews in the Torah. Emil Fackenheim, To Mend the World (Bloomington, Ind.: Indiana University Press, 1994.

15. The Damascus Affair of 1840 was an accusation of ritual murder against eight local Jews, allegedly responsible for the death of a Christian monk. They were imprisoned; several died of torture, and another was forced to convert to Islam. The affair drew wide international attention. A delegation of Jewish notables travelled to meet Syria's ruler, Muhammad Ali, including Sir Moses Montefiore of Great Britain, French lawyer Adolphe Crémieux, and the Orientalist Solomon Munk, also from France.

16. In 1860, the Alliance Israélite Universelle was formed in Paris "to work everywhere for the emancipation and moral progress of the Jews"; and to offer

Copyright © 2016. Nebraska. All rights reserved.

Anti-Judaism, Antisemitism, and Delegitimizing Israel, Nebraska, 2016. ProQuest Ebook Central,