After World War Two, the impact of Western antisemitism did not abate in the Muslim world. Nazi and fascist criminals escaped to Muslim countries where they often served as political, military or even scientific advisors. Neo-fascist Arab nationalism—Nasserism, Algerian nationalism, Baathism, Kadhafism—was largely modeled on that Hitler and Mussolini, with some borrowings from Stalin or Maoist communism as well. Radical Islam, either Sunni or Shia, reinvigorated its own antisemitism with a Western pseudo-scientific antisemitic doxa ranging from the Protocols of the Elders of Zion to Mein Kampf. New pogroms took place, new antisemitic legislation was enacted, and finally the entire Muslim world engaged in a mass expulsion of its age-old Jewish communities. Moreover, the Muslim world's cultural life, highbrow or popular, from the universities and the print media to radio, cinema, madrassa teaching, mosque preaching, and eventually the internet, has been permeated to an unprecedented level by Western-style antisemitism.

Today, the mass migration of Muslims from Arab countries, sub-Saharan Africa, Turkey, Iran, Pakistan, and other Islamic countries, allows an unreconstructed antisemitism to spread once more in Western countries and to coalesce with the local dormant or not-too-dormant post-Holocaust antisemitism. In France, the UK, the Scandinavian countries, Belgium, and the Netherlands, the main pool for antisemitism is to be found among Muslim immigrants or children of immigrants, who now account for 10% of the global population and 20–25% of the youth.

Hence the great symbolic importance of Dieudonné who, as a French-African, can be seen as "one of us" both by the white European French and by the non-white, non-European neo-French. But if Dieudonné is the prophet of this "new" antisemitism, its caliph is Alain Bonnet, a.k.a. Alain Bonnet de Soral or just Alain Soral, a 55-year-old French-Swiss actor and lumpen-intellectual who started as a communist and switched to the Far Right some ten years ago while still claiming to be a Marxist. An erstwhile critic of Dieudonné, Soral eventually befriended him, and was probably the first one to fully grasp his political potential. In 2007, he launched a political club promoting an alliance between French and neo-French anti-Zionists: Egalité-Réconciliation (Equality and reconciliation).[9]

Some suspect Dieudonné and Soral to be merely canvassing support for France's main far right political party, the National Front. Indeed, Dieudonné and Soral were very close to National Front founder Jean-Marie Le Pen for a while, his anti-immigration posture notwithstanding. In 2007, Le Pen welcomed Soral to the party's Central Committee, and in 2008, he agreed to be the godfather of Dieudonné's third child. However, Jean-Marie's daughter and political heir, Marine, very quickly distanced herself from both men,
