ritories the EU claims it "does not consider to be part of Israel's territory."[39] Then the EU's Council censured Hezbollah's "military wing." The first gesture established the EU's disapproval of Israel's borders, while the second suggested that the EU was Israel's ally nonetheless. The first move cuts to the authority of any state's sovereignty. By contrast, censuring a non-existent faction of Hezbollah allows the EU significant latitude to fund the organization by streaming money to its phantom non-military wing. Moreover, this charade lends diplomatic credibility to Hezbollah's "political wing"—an act that emboldens it and other terrorists everywhere.

In the aftermath of the EU's censure of Hezbollah's "military wing," the American Jewish Committee's press statement read, "half a loaf is better than none."[40] Perhaps there were those who similarly thought that Ashton's acknowledgment of the Holocaust was, like the temporary working definition, better than nothing. However, this satisfaction with second-rate wares drives legitimate statements and policy solutions to antisemitism and Israel's security off the table.

NOTES

1. This statement adorns the European Union's Commission website on "justice" and is under the rubric on Fundamental Rights entitled, "Racism and Xenophobia," http://ec.europa.eu/justice/fundamental-rights/racism-xenophobia/index_en.htm (accessed 11 Sept. 2014).
2. Commission for the European Communities, "Statement by EU High Representative Catherine Ashton on Holocaust Remembrance Day." 27 Jan. 2014.
3. Jonathan Sacks, "Europe's alarming antisemitism," Wall Street Journal, 2 Oct. 2014, http://online.wsj.com/articles/europes-alarming-new-anti-semitism-1412270003 (accessed 3 Oct. 2014).
4. European Union Agency for Fundamental Rights. FRA, Human rights education at Holocaust memorial sites across the European Union (Vienna: European Union Agency for Fundamental Rights, 2011).
5. Ibid., 31, emphasis added.
6. Communication of Ms. Sandra de Waele, First Counsellor, Head of Political and Press Section of the European Union delegation in Israel at the 4th International Conference of the Global Forum for Combatting Antisemitism, 28–30 May 2013, Jerusalem. For the official final report, see European Union Agency for Fundamental Rights (FRA), Discrimination and Hate Crimes against Jews in EU Member States: experiences and perceptions of antisemitism (Vienna, 2013).
7. Isabel Kershner, "Fury in Israel at Remark Linking Gaza to Toulouse," New York Times, 20 Mar. 2012, http://www.nytimes.com/2012/03/21/world/middleeast/israel-criticizes-eu-official-for-comments-on-french-school-attack.html?_r=0 (accessed 12 Sept. 2014)
8. Ibid.

Copyright © 2016. Nebraska. All rights reserved.

Anti-Judaism, Antisemitism, and Delegitimizing Israel, Nebraska, 2016. ProQuest Ebook Central,