lamic Committee was established. In 1995, Dzhemal established the supra-regional Islamic Committee of Russia. From the early 1990s he became an active media personality, establishing the information center Tauhid (the Arabic word that describes the doctrine of Oneness of God), the newspaper Al-Vakhdat (Unity), producing TV shows on Islamic issues—Nyne (Today), Minaret, All Chapters of the Koran, and 1001 Days. He is a member of the coordination council of the Russian Left Front, and a member of the oppositional movement Other Russia. In 2010, Dzhemal signed the anti-Putin manifesto, "Putin must go."[12] The previous year he had been accused of praising Islamist rebels in the North Caucasus on his website. However, he was not charged for that, and only changed the domain from .ru to .org. In 2012, following the publication on his website of the article "The Role of Woman in Jihad" by the head of Al-Qaeda in the Arabian Peninsula, FSB officials conducted a search at his home for illegal materials but did not find anything.[13]

Dzhemal's philosophical conception combines Shia Islamic and leftist rhetoric and includes such ingredients as militant political Islamism; Wahhabism, anti-imperialism, Marxism; a strategic anti-western alliance of Islam and Orthodox Christianity (which he presented at an Orthodox-Islamic Conference in St. Petersburg in 1999); conspiracy theories concerning the modern world ruled by transnational corporations, supranational elites, the United States, the CIA, Israel, and World Zionism; plus an appropriation of German Romanticism and Christian Liberation Theology, and, not least, a rejection of Sufism and the Arab establishment.

In 2004, Dzhemal explained the Arab-Israeli conflict from his interpretation of Islamic philosophy as a struggle over Abraham's inheritance because the Jews had rejected the rights of Ismail (Ishmael; see Genesis 25:5).[14] Islam in this struggle represents the real Judaism and Christianity, because Abraham and Moses allegedly called their tradition "Islam." Thus, Jews have to recognize that the al-Aqsa Mosque in Jerusalem is the Third Temple and the Caliph Umar is a messiah—as was accepted by many Jews who converted to Islam after the Muslims had conquered Jerusalem. According to Dzhemal, those converted Jews are ancestors of the Palestinians who are the legitimate owners of the Holy Land—not the newcomers of mixed Polish-German-Finnish-Slavic origin from Lithuania. The only solution of the conflict lies in dismantling the apartheid state of Israel and its replacement by the all-citizens state of Palestine.[15]

Dzhemal is not exclusively a religious thinker. As an active politician, he consistently rejects the right of the State of Israel to exist in political terms.
