We can see an example of similar thinking in his 2009 remarks on the Armenian-Azerbaijani conflict in Nagorno-Karabakh region:

> Armenia as a state should be dismantled—in that is hidden the key for the settlement of the conflict. Are you surprised? Who said that it should be settled peacefully?! Moreover, I do not call for an extermination of Armenians. As a matter of the fact, Armenians may get on in the territory of the Irevan Khanate, i.e., in the territory of Azerbajdzhan. For goodness sake, they may live their life peacefully, fix shoes, and play on flutes. Only Armenia as an independent state should not be, that is all. The same way, Israel should not be—this is the fundamental demand of all faithful Muslims. Jews may live there only as citizens of the united Palestinian state. Nobody says that Jews should be exterminated.[16]

In January 2009, Dzhemal denied the right of Israel to self-defense, claiming of Operation Cast Lead that:

> This is barefaced genocide, an attempt to break the will to resist of the Palestinian people, to deprive them of the democratically elected Hamas that they [Israelis] try to discredit by causing suffering to the civilian population because they cannot defeat it [Hamas]. However, I think that the Israeli military machine is caught in a trap because the racist evil essence of the Israeli State, of Zionism, was demonstrated and hundreds of thousands of people came out on the streets all over the world to protest against the Israeli actions—it is de facto the moral dismantling of the Israeli state.[17]

In the spirit of the time (just several months after the Russian invasion of Georgia) he deliberately emphasized the Israeli-Georgian military collaboration declaring that the Israeli-Georgian (and probably Egyptian) "dirty Axis of Evil" was lured by the United States against not only the Arab world in general and Iran in particular, but also against Russia. Therefore he praised the Russian attempts to legitimize Hamas and its leader Khaled Mashal in the international sphere (for that he thanked the Russian Orthodox Patriarch Alexii II personally) and advised Russia to take the opportunity to lead the anti-American and anti-Israel forces in Europe and the Middle East.[18]

Holocaust denial plays a significant role in Dzhemal's anti-Zionist rhetoric. In the same 2009 article, he argued that the United States had made use of Zionism since 1943(!) in order to dismantle "defeated Europe" by using the Holocaust as the "baton against the whole of Europe."[19] Moreover, he considered the Holocaust to be an American instrument to justify its
