"Anti-Zionists" again spread old antisemitic stereotypes, in new clothes. In almost every Western country today, except the United States and Canada, a majority of the people regards Israel as one of the most despicable countries in the world and have a positive view of the "Palestinians."

In every Western country, even in the United States, few realize that the invention of the "Palestinian people" has become a weapon of war against Israelis and even Jews. Terror attacks have not stopped and will not halt so long as Arab nationalism and radical Islam exist. Nor will the diplomatic attacks stop as long as Western countries blindly accept the "Palestinian" narrative about Israel.

There is no sign that European countries will change course, not that the European media will change its discourse. Multiple economic ties connect European countries to the Arab Muslim world. The Islamic influence on Europe is growing, despite the horrors of Syria, Libya, and especially the "Islamic State." Moreover, hostility toward Jews never really disappeared in Europe; it just adapted to new circumstances. The Jewish State now plays the role of the "collective Jew," with European Jews treated as its "henchmen."

It is by no means certain that the United States will remain an exception. The anti-Zionist propaganda machine has infiltrated academia and is incrasingly inciting Americans to become anti-Israel. The Obama administration is probably the most hostile administration to Israel in history—the dismaying result of Leftist anti-Zionist efforts to demonize America and the values of economic freedom, decentralized government and individual liberties which America has traditionally promoted.

The decline of the Muslim world started well before Zionism and Israel emerged. Yet, the Arab world is still using Israel as a decoy to hide its multiple failures and channel its frustration. The success of Israel has certainly highlighted the bankruptcy and corruption of authoritarian governance in the Arab Middle East. But Israel has no responsibility for what happened to the Muslim world or for the failure of their own societies. Israel could not have done more to be tolerated and accepted by the Muslim world, apart from ceasing to exist altogether. It could not bring democracy and liberty to countries with no experience or appetite for such an evolution. The Muslim world is what it is.

Israel also has no responsibility for the choices that led to the pro-Arab policies of Europe. The choices made in Europe are the result of the cynical and short-sighted political calculations of European leaders. Israel had no oil to offer to Europe in the 1970s. It did not threaten to plant bombs in European cities. And as Jews are a tiny minority in every European country, their votes did not count electorally. Israel also has no responsibility for the
