Conclusion

Palestinian replacement theology combines anti-Judaism with its ancient roots, with liberation theology's ideology that "Palestinizes" Jesus and the Bible, while it delegitimizes Zionism as the fruit of a narrow, nationalistic and perverted Judaism. It supports boycott campaigns against Israel. The network of churches and organizations that have endorsed Palestinian replacement theology spreads the belief that despising Israel is a true act of faith and Chistian love. This theological-political anti-Zionism has already spread throughout the Christian world, and as has happened in the past, the role of clergy, activists, and passive bystanders are conducive to the diffusion of this new antisemitism.

Notes

1. See Michel Remaud, "De quelques problèmes mal posés," Un Echo d'Israel (Dec. 2002), http://www.voir-entendre-decouvrir.org/isra%C3%ABI/archives-d-un-echo-d-isra%C3%ABI/n-4-d%C3%C3%A9cembre-2002/.

2. Francesco Rossi de Gasperis, S.J., "L'intifada palestinese, una pietra sul dialogo ebraico-cristiano?" Mondo e Missione (Mar. 2002): 11-14.

3. See. Robert S. Wistrich, From Ambivalence to Betrayal: The Left, the Jews, and Israel (Lincoln, Neb.: University of Nebraska Press, 2012), 74–77.

4. See Robert S. Stuart, "A 'De Profundis' for Christian Socialism: French Marxists and the Critique of Political Catholicism, 1882–1905," French Historical Studies 22, no. 2 (Spring 1999): 241–61, 255–56.

5. See Giuseppe Ruggierei, "Christianity and Socialism in Italy: Semantic and Theological Reflections," in Christianity and Socialism, edited by Johann-Baptist Metz and jean-Pierre Jossua (New York: Seabury Press, 1977), 1–12.

6. Marie-Dominique Chenu, La "doctrine sociale" de l'Eglise comme ideologie (Paris: CERF, 1979), 26. By analyzing the evolution of the social doctrine of the Catholic church, the author explains that "salvation" and "liberation" have progressively acquired new meanings since the first opening of the Church to the social question in the 1890s. From its abstract and theologically absulte turms it is transposed into situational-historical domains, whereby salvation becomes significant in terms of liberation from specific historical situations of oppression. This change paved the way to liberation theology in Latin America, contextual theology in South Africa, upon which Palestinian theology builds.

7. David I. Kertzer, The Popes against the Jews (New York: Alfred A. Knopf, 2001), 180–95, 264–76.

8. See Mark Engler, "Towards the 'Rights of the Poor': Human Rights in Liberation theology," Journal of Religious Ethics 28, no. 3 (Fall 2000): 339–65; Chenu, La "doctrine sociale" de l'Eglise, 90. As Chenu observes, the main eveolution of Catholic and Christian thought in these years is a enw concept of the Church's mission in history, vested in the role of spreading a salvific-messianic message in which men and their deeds become the primary means of liberation.

Copyright © 2016. Nebraska. All rights reserved.

Anti-Judaism, Antisemitism, and Delegitimizing Israel, Nebraska, 2016. ProQuest Ebook Central,