cherish, and against the nation that stands in the front line of the defence of the west against barbarism. In turning against Israel and the Jewish people, the west is turning against itself.

Can the west still pull back from this civilisational brink? The question cannot yet be answered. Faced with impending peril, some cultures have pulled themselves together; others have been destroyed. All is not currently lost in the west, although its defence is becoming more and more difficult. But giving up is not an option. We must just keep on keeping on, in the hope that eventually reason and self-preservation will prevail.

Meanwhile the most embattled country in the world, surrounded by enemies out to destroy it and subjected to unprecedented levels of malice and demonisation even by its ostensible allies, is the one nation whose economy, birth rate, and creative genius are in the most robust of health. With the Islamic world stagnating in the grip of the death cult it has spawned, and with the west seemingly in the process of committing cultural suicide, it looks astoundingly as if beleaguered little Israel may turn out to be the last man standing.
