a rock does nothing; continuous dripping destroys the rock." Another official noted at the UNISPAL meeting heald at UNESCO in Paris on June 1, 2012: "There are no non-combattants in Israel as women serve in the army, and youth in paramilitary movements. All are legitimate targets." How then might such a State and such a People, shorn of humanity, be accepted into the family of nations?

Indeed, media atttrition has resulted in a visceral subliminal public response. The words "Jew," "Israel," and "Zionism" now evoke a biased synaptic reaction—cognitive differentiation based on deep-rooted prejudices consecrated as snap assumptions. Hollywood black-hat cowboys were, by definition, "baddies"; white-hats were "good guys." The exceptions always proved the rule. The word "Jew" and its associated homonyms are no longer neutral. No longer received with indifference. Both, qualitatively and quantitatively, they increasing evoke the dark side.

The Prussian military strategist, Carl von Clausewitz, long ago defined "diplomacy" as "war by other means." Today, I suggest that "heritage is war by every means." The vector is the World Heritage Committee (WHC) of UNESCO—an organization once highly valued for its professionalism in preserving protected sites—specifically when we called on its intervention in Poland to remove the discothèque located very close to Auschwitz.

Since Palestine's entry into UNESCO in November 2011, the WHC has been hijacked to the ferocious appetite of identity theft.

- The Cave of the Patriarchs (Machpela) in Hebron, and the Tomb of Rachel in Bethlehem have been reclassified as mosques.
- By a strategem—and against the decision of the WHC professional consultants—Palestine obtained the Church of the Nativity and the Bethlehem Pilgrimage Route, even after the historic church had been occupied by Fatah terrorists who were responsible for several wounded among the clergy and property damage. Since the church's inscription, PLO leaders have designated Jesus a Palestinian.[7]
- This year in Qatar—again, against professional objections—Palestine received Battir (in Hebrew, Beitar), the site of Bar Kochba's revolt against Roman occupation and the last stand for Jewish national independence in the land of Israel before the advent of modern Zionism.
- Palestine's wish-list includes the Old Cities of Hebron and Jericho, the Qumran Caves, and the Dead Sea Scrolls.

A book I found at the 2014 Frankfurt Book Fair (where we annually monitor antisemitism on the display stands) published by a Hamas front, is entitled The Buraq Wall, claiming that Mohammad, on his legendary night
