NOTES

1. "South African Danger," Yediot Achronot, 23 Nov. 2013. For the Durban conference see Robert S. Wistrich, A Lethal Obsession. Anti-Semitism from Antiquity to the Global Jihad (New York: Random House, 2010), 486–87.

2. See Muslim News, 28 Nov. 1975, and interview with Ibraheem Mousa, in The Jews in South Africa. What Future?, edited byTzippi Hoffman and Alan Fischer (Johannesburg: Southern Book Publishers, 1988), 171–74.

3. See Muhammed Haron, "The Muslim News (1960–1986): Expression of an Islamic Identity in South Africa," in Muslim Identity and Social Change in Sub-Saharan Africa, edited by Louis Brenner (London: Hurst & Co., 1993), 222–23.

4. Farid Esack, "Three Islamic Strands in the South African Struggle for Justice," Third World Quarterly 10 (2) (1988): 486. South African Muslims, mostly Sunni, numbered 654,064 or 1.5% of the total population in the 2001 Census, the most recent that included religious identification. Muslims were considered part of the "Colored" population within the old apartheid categories. They are descendants of seventeenth-century political prisoners brought to the Cape from Indonesia—ex-slaves, nineteenth-century immigrants, and the off-spring of black/white miscegenation. See Ebrahim Moosa, "Islam in South Africa," in Living Faiths in South Africa, edited by Martin Prozesky and John de Gruchy (Cape Town: David Philip, 1975).

5. Farid Esack, Qur'an, Liberation and Pluralism (Oxford: One World Books, 1997), 224.

6. Ibid., 225.

7. Milton Shain, "South Africa," in American Jewish Year Book, edited by David Singer and Ruth Seldin 108 (2008): 559. See also http://supernatural.blogs.com/weblog/2008/09/south=Africa-al.html.

8. Muslim Outlook, 18 Apr. 1925.

9. Muslims protested outside Cape Town against the "occupation of Palestine by the Zionists. . . ." See Haron "The Muslim News (1960–1986)," 222.

10. In "Barbarity of the Jews" (Muslim News, 14 July 1967) it was stated that "1948 and 1967 show that despite centuries of wandering in Europe they [the Jews] have not lost their barbaric tendencies which previously incurred the wrath of God." See also Muslim News, 28 July 1967.

11. See Muhammed Haron, "Islam, Intellectuals and the South African Question," in Intellectual traditions in South Africa. Ideas, Individuals and Institutions, edited by Peter Vale, Lawrence Hamilton and Estelle H. Prinsloo (Scottsville: University of KwaZulu-Natal Press, 2014). Haron provides a concise overview of shifting Islamic intellectual traditions in South Africa.

12. Muslim News, 10 Apr. 1971.

13. Esack, Qur'an, Liberation and Pluralism, 33.

14. See Abdulkader Tayob, Islamic Resurgence in South Africa (Cape Town: University of Cape Town Press, 1995), chapter 4, especially, 118–19.

15. Tayob, Islamic Resurgence, 122.

16. See Ibid., 140 and Haron, "Islam, Intellectuals and the South African Question," 223.

17. See Ebrahim Rasool, interview in Hoffman and Fischer, Jews in South Africa, 118.

18. Ibid., passim.

Copyright © 2016. Nebraska. All rights reserved.

Anti-Judaism, Antisemitism, and Delegitimizing Israel, Nebraska, 2016. ProQuest Ebook Central,